SUE INNES MEMORIAL LECTURE 2012

This public lecture is organised by Women's History Scotland and hosted by the School of History, Classics and Archaeology at the University of Edinburgh.

Professor Viviene Cree

(Social Work, Edinburgh)

'History and Policy: Comparing Narratives of Sexual Exploitation'

On Friday 12 October at 5.30pm
In the Meadows Lecture Theatre,
Ground Floor, William Robertson Wing, University of Edinburgh
Followed by a reception in the Macmillan room 6.45-7.15pm

Viviene Cree is Professor of Social Work at the University of Edinburgh, where she has specialised in research on social work history, on feminism and gender in social work, on HIV and children, and young people affected by parental illness. She is best known to historians as the author of From Public Streets to Private Lives. The Changing Task of Social Work (Aldershot, 1997). In this public lecture she will show how historical research is vital to our understanding of contemporary policy debates, comparing the rhetoric surrounding the trafficking of young women in the 1880s (the 'Maiden Tribute of Modern Babylon') with that of the early twenty-first century.
